

Infant Mortality.

Infant Mortality is the recorded amount of deaths of babies during their first year of life. Infant Mortality rates in Third World countries are usually higher than in Developed countries such as England or America. The cause is usually due to lack of food, no proper medical equipment, mal nutrition and most of all, poverty.

This map shows what countries suffer most from high Infant Mortality rates throughout the world.

